The burning out of a chimney in the Dr. A. B. Smith tenement on Main street, recently sold by Walter Adams, on Monday came near being the cause of a serious conflagration and doubtless would have had it not been smothered by the use of an underwriters' fire extinguisher.

The item in the Chelsea news of Monday's issue which states that the promenade to be held at the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, the 30th inst., under the auspices of the Grange, is an error, due to misinformation, as the Grange has nothing to do with this social function so far as management is concerned, and this correction is made at the suggestion of a member of the Grange.

Fine Entertainment For Friday Night.

A fine entertainment is promised at the Barre opera house Friday evening of this week when Miss Jean Wilson comes under the auspices of the Civic Federation, assisted by Whittier's orchestra and Edwin Bruce. Of Miss Wilson, the Burlington Free Press said last Saturday:

"The feature of the first ladies' night entertainment of the season at the Elhan Allen club last evening was the hour or more of story and monologue by Miss Jean Wilson, the talented Washington reader. Miss Wilson is well known in Burlington and elsewhere in Vermont through her many successful appearances a year ago. She delighted her friends, both old and new, last evening and was enthusiastically received. When a flexible voice, thoroughly trained, and with an enunciation at all times clear and distinct, her impersonations and recitals were rendered with consummate skill and were most striking and impressive. Her stage presence is natural and refined; she has a pure speaking voice and appreciation of rhythm; is graceful and true to nature in face, modulation and pose, while her selections are rendered with a spirit that convinces her listeners of her appreciation of the dramatic art. Her remarkable versatility renders her at home alike in representing the various emotions. She was repeatedly encoored, and by request gave several selections that especially pleased her audience when she was in Burlington a year ago."
